Why would anyone need a quilt in the summer?

Summer is here, and the warm weather makes regular quilts seem hot and sticky. But just because it's summer doesn't mean all your quilts have to be put away. Have you considered making a lightweight quilt?

To make a lightweight quilt you need to consider two things: fabric and batting. Of course the fabric of choice is always cotton. The next thing to consider is batting. It might seem that the heavier or loftier the batting, the warmer the quilt, but it's actually not quite so simple. Polyester, for example, feels extremely lightweight. If you use it as your quilt batting, your quilt will not weigh as much as it would if you used cotton or wool. However, as a synthetic fiber, polyester is not as breathable as some of your other choices, and will result in a warmer quilt.

Cotton is slightly better, though it weighs a lot and will feel heavy even as it breathes. I recommend bamboo batting for lightweight quilts. It's silky and lightweight with excellent breathability, yet is still a sustainable natural fiber. Perfect for a summer quilt. Another option is Silk batting. Silk has the natural ability to breath, making it an excellent choice for airy, lightweight quilts and coverlets. It provides excellent warmth with very little weight. Or consider a silk, bamboo, cotton blend like Dream Orient from Quilters Dream.

Another traditional option for lightweight quilts is using a layer of flannel between the top and backing. It doesn't require as much quilting and drapes beautifully. 108" cream flannel is coming to the shop soon.

We have given you have lots of options! Now start making beautiful summer quilts!
